RESIGNATION

Offered By President of Jeffersontown Commercial Club.

Mr. E. R. Sprowl Says He is Not Getting Proper Support—Proposed Hall Discussed By Small Crowd Present.

Thirteen proved to be unlucky for the Jeffersontown Commercial Club Monday night at its meeting held at the schoolhouse, as there were only 13 members present, and the President, Mr. E. R. Sprowl, offered his resignation, claiming he was not getting proper support. This action came as a shock to the small crowd present, and after Mr. Sprowl made a earnest talk of several minutes, Mr. W. J. Semolina arose and asked that Mr. W. A. Wheeler take the chair. Mr. Semolina urged that Mr. Sprowl reconsider the matter, as the success of the club depended upon him entirely, and made a motion that the club not accept his resignation but refer the matter to the executive committee to be met on at the next regular meeting. The motion carried.

Messrs. J. H. Mittler and R. A. Bickel addressed the crowd and spoke in glowing terms of the efforts of Mr. Sprowl in behalf of the club and of the town, which he has done so much for and for which he has received such little credit. Mr. Bickel made a motion that the secretary write a strong letter, appealing to the members to attend the meetings and help build up our town by giving their endorsement to the work, if not actually doing any work along that line. His motion carried and the secretary will again send out circulars to all members urging them to be present at the next meeting, which will be held at the schoolhouse Monday night, May 16.

The following resolutions of respect were adopted:

Whereas the Supreme Ruler of the Universe has called away our valued young member, Henry F. Stuckey, Jr., who departed this life on March 14, 1910, Therefore be it Resolved: That the Jeffersontown Commercial Club has lost a good member and one who will be greatly missed by the organization.

Second: That the bereaved family have been deprived of a tender and loving son and brother, whose vacant place will be sadly felt.

Third: That the members of the Commercial Club are deeply grieved over the death of Mr. Stuckey, Jr., and extend sincere sympathy to those who are left to mourn him.

Fourth: That these resolutions be recorded in the Secretary's book, that a copy be sent to the family of the departed member, and that same be published in this official newspaper.

L. M. BRYAN,
J. C. ALLOWS,
Committee.

A Mountain Flower

BY ELDEBE.

In something less than half an hour they all returned to the lower rooms, where they encountered Larnie and Ned. Floy immediately apprised them of the fact that she had an invitation to the ball.

"We have had just such luck," said Larnie. "I happened to be acquainted with a member of the council, and was so fortunate as to receive an invitation."

"Then you will go, won't you?" inquired Floy.

"Yes, indeed," answered Larnie. "I would not miss it for anything. I always prefer a village dance to a society crush such as we have in the city. And you?"

"Oh, I never attended a crush," she replied. "I mean, will you attend the ball?"

"Well, of all questions to ask me, is your name Larnie Gilman," she inquired, with the Yankee trick of answering his question by asking another one.

Larnie laughed, but Floy never stopped to hear what his answer would be, for seeing Sam in a distant part of the garden, she seized her brother's large straw hat and sped away after the old man who was setting cabbage plants.

"Well, honey, what is it you want?" he inquired, laying the towel aside, and awaiting her commands.

"I want you to saddle Swift and bring her to the front gate, if you please, Uncle Sam. I must go to the village this morning."

"Alright, honey, I'll be as soon as you're ready," he answered, starting in the direction of the barn.

Flora returned to the house and was soon ready for her trip. Swift was brought around, and when Floy had mounted, Mrs. Hazleton handed her a large parcel and an envelope containing the order for remodeling Nina's and Gladys's ball dresses. Floy had refused to have any changes made in her dress. She declared that Miss Marsden would make the train half so long as it was, and that perhaps she would keep part of the gauze over dress and sell it for face veils.

Mrs. Hazleton let her have her way, for the dress was lovely as it was, and fitted the girl's slight figure to perfection.

Floy waved her hand to the group on the porch, and Swift galloped away and was soon out of sight. Nina and Gladys brought their sewing work and came out upon the porch where Larnie and Ned were seated. Larnie threw away his cigar when the ladies approached.

"I never waste a good cigar by throwing it away in that reckless manner," said Ned. "No, not even for my adorable cousin and sister. But perhaps the ladies are averse to the odor of smoke," said Larnie, placing chairs for the girls.

"Not at all," replied Nina, seating herself. "We are quite accustomed to it, for with such a brother as Ned about us—"

"Know it would be quite useless to object," finished Ned, leaning over the back of Gladys's chair and puffing a cloud of smoke into her face. Gladys seized the cigar and flung it into the yard.

"Not always useless, my dear cousin," said she, with a smile. Ned took another cigar from his pocket and resumed his teasing. At last Gladys declared she would hear it no longer, so she descended to the yard and took refuge in the hammock.

The young people had planned to spend the afternoon in rowing on the river, and after dinner they repaired to the creek, from whence Ned was for Floy who had not returned from the village. Nina suggested going without her, but Larnie refused, saying that she had promised to go in the boat with him.

"No, you had better not leave her, if you know which side your bread is buttered on," said Ned. If Floy should come, and find all the boats gone, she would raise the roof off the house."

"Do be a little more moderate in your expressions, Ned," said Gladys. "Floy is not quite a Hercules."

In the meantime Floy had been to the village, and was upon her way home. In coming along the highway she espied Charlie Brandon and Fred Marsden at work with the farm-hands in Mr. Marsden's hay-field. She stopped her horse and called to Fred, both he and Charlie stopped their work and came to the fence. How handsome her young lover looked, thought Floy. How becoming was the loose, white flannel shirt, laced down the front with a tiny blue silk cord. A large straw hat was pushed far back on his handsome head, showing the rings of dark hair that clustered about his broad, manly brow.

"Say, Fred, I hope I'm not interrupting you, but I'm bound to find out if you are going."

"You are not interrupting us at all for we are merely taking a little exercise. But where is it you wish to know if I am going?" inquired Fred, leaning against the fence and wiping the perspiration from his brow.

"Why, to the ball, of course," she answered. "The ball is in the temperance hall at Rockdale."

CHAPTER XXIII.

BOATING.

When Floy reached home and found that Larnie was over her spirits

some-what dampened, but not for long for Aunt Cleo had saved her a goodly share of ambrosia which Floy soon dispensed with and then joined the party on the veranda.

"What kept you so long, Floy?" inquired Nina, as Floy made her appearance.

"Nothing kept me. I stayed because I wanted to. As I was coming home I saw Mr. Brandon and Fred in the field, and I stopped to have a little chat with them. They are coming over this afternoon to go boating with us."

"Oh dear, must we wait forthim?" said Nina impatiently.

"Of course," replied Floy. "You could hardly expect me to go without them after inviting them to go with us. It is too warm to go now anyway."

"But what shall we do to pass away the time until they come?"

"We might play croquet," suggested Gladys. "The maple grove is cool and shady."

"I hate croquet," said Nina. "Well, we'll excuse you," said Floy, "and Ned and I will play against Gladys and Mr. Gilman."

"Agreed," said Larnie, and without further ado they started for the croquet grounds. Several rustic wicker tables under the maple trees that shaded the ground, and upon one of these Nina sat and watched the game, hoping in her secret heart that Flora would be defeated. She began to think that her wishes were to be realized, for both Gladys and Larnie were rowers with their balls lying close together.

Settling Flora out Ned had touched the first stake.

"We are going to make a wish, you know," said Larnie, preparing to take his stroke.

"Don't be too sure," answered Floy, as Larnie aimed at Gladys's ball and missed it. "Now I'll go with a better result," and with a dexterous stroke she hit Ned's ball, sent it against the stake; hit the stake herself; ran two weeks and separated her opponents' balls. After that it was a closely contested game.

Fred Marsden and Charlie Brandon arrived in due time, and seating themselves, watched the game with interest. Nina became impatient with waiting, but it availed nothing, for the merry game was not until late in the afternoon. The sun had traveled far to the west and the surrounding hills were casting lengthy shadows in the green valleys. Flora and Ned were victors at last, much to the discomfiture of Larnie and Gladys.

As they were returning to the house the supper bell rang, and Fred and Charlie accepted an invitation to stay for supper. After supper they were to go rowing by moonlight. Mrs. Hazleton had evidently expected company, for a table larger than usual was spread in the dining-room.

"O, my, but I'm hungry, after that long game," said Floy, as they entered the room. "I feel as though I could eat two pounds of salad and a dozen beef biscuits; but as we have company I suppose I'll have to do with less."

Gladys gave her a pinch on the arm that silenced her for the moment, but she took her part in the conversation that made the meal a merry one. Supper over, the young people went down to the river where several small boats were rocking upon the waves. There were two boats, each large enough for four persons, and one tiny shell of a skiff, scarcely large enough for two. The skiff belonged to Floy and she was to row in any other. As was generally the case, Floy was ahead of the others and reached the river first. Springing into the bubble, as her boat was called, she quickly unhooked the chain that held it to a tree, and seizing the oars, paddled out into the stream.

"Hold on Miss Floy remember your promise," cried Larnie, as he saw she meant to leave him.

"Well, hurry up, and I'll wait for you," she answered demurely, stopping the boat.

"But how am I to get to your boat?" he inquired, laughing. "You are in mid-stream."

"You don't want to get in this boat; get in one of the larger ones and come ahead," she answered. "Then there will be no danger of my getting a ducking. The bubble is very frail, as its name signifies."

"Yes, Mr. Gilman, go in the Sylph or Waterwitch," said Nina, "for either one is more comfortable than that tiny shell."

Larnie hid his disappointment as best he could, for he knew Floy meant to understand that it would be impossible to persuade her to change her mind and allow him to row her, as she had promised. He submitted to Nina's wishes as gracefully as possible, and soon they were all upon the water. Larnie, Nina and Fred in the Sylph; Charlie, Gladys and Ned in the Waterwitch.

"I shall go up or down stream," inquired Floy, for once willing to submit to the wishes of the others.

"Up stream," replied Ned, rowing in the direction of Hart Island; "then we can drift back."

"There are such lovely water-lilies growing near the island," said Gladys,

"And any amount of wild pinks, too," sang out Floy, who kept her boat just behind the others.

"I'll wager if there is anything to eat anywhere you are the one to know it, Floy," said Ned.

"And you are the one to help eat it," retorted Floy.

"Yes, and there are more of us in the same boat," said Ned, "for when there is anything to eat on hand, I want to be there, too."

"Tell us something we don't know," said Floy, using her words with unnecessary force, and dashing the spray in every direction, showering it over the occupants of the other boats.

"It seems we are about to be deluged," said Larnie, who was oarsman of the Sylph. "Let us try to keep out of reach of the enemy. He rowed with renewed vigor, but Floy experienced no difficulty in keeping up with him, for her match in the art of rowing was a cash deal."

The Speculator, Suburbanite and Gardener are Requested to Examine this Property, which will be Sold at Auction on the Premises

TUESDAY, MAY 10, 1910,

AT 3 O'CLOCK P. M.

"The Nannie Gabler Tract,"

Containing 41 acres of limestone land, on middle fork of Beargrass creek, facing Cannon's lane, sometimes called Guilford lane, where L. & E. electric cars afford transportation; three-quarters of a mile from Cherokee Drive.

This tract has upon it about twenty acres of first-class plateau garden land, or land suitable for subdivision at no distant day. About three acres of orchard. Fine Beargrass bottom land for corn or potatoes and beautiful hillside for pasture. Beargrass Creek runs through the property, supplying an abundance of fresh, pure water. Good rock quarry on Cannon's lane.

Improvements consist of nice 6-room house, cottage for help; good barn 30x60 feet, with sheds, corn crib, chicken house and smoke house. This place adjoins the famous Barks farm, now owned by Mr. R. S. Veech. No better place in Jefferson county for a dairy.

The speculator can buy this and subdivide to advantage. The suburbanite can here obtain a home for himself and make a settlement by subdivision to his own liking. The gardener can here make an attractive home, big interest on money invested and increasing value of land will make his children rich.

Dollars planted here will grow as luxuriantly as vegetables. TERMS—One-third cash; balance in 1, 2 and 3 years, with 6 per cent interest, payable semi-annually. Insurance, fire and precipitating clause in deed. Buyer to pay taxes for year 1910. Possession January 1, 1911.

BUYS FARM

In Jefferson County After Trying Farming In California—Harvey Tyler and Son

Purchase Geo. L. Hughes' Farm.

Mr. Harvey Tyler and son, Edward, who left Kentucky several years ago and located in San Diego, Cal., have returned to Jefferson county and bought the farm of 36 acres belonging to Mr. Geo. L. Hughes, near Middletown, for $3,250. The sale was made by Mr. E. L. Sprowl, the hustling real estate agent, of Jefferson-town. Messrs. Tyler propose to run an up-to-date dairy and chicken farm. The return of these gentlemen to their home county, after going to California and trying farming there demonstrates the fact that old Jefferson county is as good a place as can be found anywhere.

WILL SEE CIRCUS.

Hundreds From This City and Surrounding Country to Visit Ringling Shows.

Ringling Brothers' circus is the magnet that will attract hundreds of visitors from this city and the surrounding country to Louisville on Saturday, May 14. The railroads are offering special inducements in the way of cheap rates.

The program the Ringlings are offering this year is nothing less than wonderful. It is given by 375 artists. Over 200 of them are Europeans, making their first tour of America. There are no less than 100 big acts. Novelties will be presented by the telephoning elephants; the wonderful Schuman horses, from Albert Schuman's German circus—the Lorch family of acrobats; the Artus-Baron trio of strong men; Robledo, the Spanish wire dancer; the Mancello-Marniti family of upside-down bell-ringers; the Alexis family of aerialists; the Dutton company of equestrians; the aerial Klarkians; and the fifty funniest clowns in the world.

The chief attraction of the menagerie is Darryl, the missing link. He looks more like a human being than some men. Darwin lives in his own house. He has windows, pictures on the wall, electric lights and a hot water heater. He dines at a table with a complete table equipment. He wears the clothes of a man. He carries a watch and is fond of a soothing pipe. He is a friendly chap and likes to shake hands with visitors. Another attractive member of the menagerie is Jennie, an elephant that has just passed her 24th birthday. When George Washington was still president of the United States, she was brought from the wilds of India to become an attraction in the Zoological Gardens at London, England. She was then 100 years old. She is still in her prime, for elephants have been known to live 500 years. More than likely Jennie will live to eat peanuts from the hands of children whose great grandparents are yet unborn.

The forenoon parade is far the best street spectacle the Ringling Brothers have ever devised. It was built in the foreign workshops of the show near Liverpool last winter at a cost of more than $1,000,000. It was made from designs executed by the best artists of Italy and France. In it will be seen 1,280 people from all parts of the world, 650 horses and more than half the elephants in America. It will be three miles long. It leaves the show grounds at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Quarterly Meeting.

The third quarterly meeting for Jeffersontown and Cooper's Memorial Circuit will be held at Cooper's Memorial church, May 7th and 8th, at 11 a. m., and on Sunday at 3 p. m. will be celebrated at the same church the 14th anniversary of the Cooper's Memorial W. F. Missionary Society. Appropriate addresses will be made. Be sure and attend.

Do you know that less than two cents a week pays for your county paper a year?

ACCIDENTAL

Discharge of Shotgun Results in Death of

Albert Porter, a Young Farmer of Near Fisherville.

Albert Porter, a young farmer, 21 miles above Fisherville, was shot and killed by the accidental discharge of his shotgun shortly after four o'clock Thursday afternoon. The load entered the body under the right shoulder blade and caused instant death.

Porter and his brother, John Porter, had gone into the woods a half-mile from his home for a wagon load of firewood. Porter took his gun with him, telling his wife he might kill squirrels for their supper. He was standing on the running gear, leaning on the gun when the wheel struck a stump and the gun was discharged.

John Porter, who was driving, saw his brother fall from the wagon and rushed to his side. He expired in a few seconds. Neighbors were summoned and the victim was removed to his home. Coroner Ellis Duncan held an inquest at the residence.

Porter is survived by his widow, one child, his father and a brother. The funeral was conducted from the residence at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. Burial was in the Bethlehem cemetery.

Rev. J. L. McFarland will preach at Pleasant Grove next Sunday.

Mrs. T. Hoke and Miss Will Ella Hoke, of Jeffersontown, and Mrs. J. N. Clem, of Pewee Valley, were guests of Mrs. Claud Tatchell Friday.

Mrs. Wm. Slaughter, who has been very ill, is better.

Those who attended the convention at the Clifton Christian church Friday were Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Stockoff, Mrs. John Waters, Mrs. Peary, Miss Mamie Clure, Mr. Nelson Clure. They were entertained to supper by Mr. and Mrs. Stockoff, of Clifton.

Mrs. B. T. Coleman's Sunday-school class and Mrs. Geo. Hardy's class of the Christian Sunday-school gave a picnic in Geo. Geo. Hardy's yard Saturday. There were about thirty children present. Games were played and delightful refreshments, consisting of cakes, cream, candies and nuts, were served. All spent a glorious day.

In Bad Fix

"I had a mishap at the age of 41, which left me in bad fix," writes Mrs. Georgia Usher, of Conyers, Ga. "I was unconscious for three days, and after that I would have fainting spells, dizziness, nervousness, sick headache, heart palpitation and many strange feelings. I suffered greatly with ailments due to the change of life and had 3 doctors, but they did no good, so I concluded to try Cardui."

"Since taking Cardui, I am so much better and can do all my housework."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Do not allow yourself to get into a bad fix. You might get in so bad you would find it hard to get out.

Better take Cardui while there is time, while you are still in moderately good health, just to conserve your strength and keep you in tip top condition.

In this way your troubles, whatever they are, will gradually grow smaller instead of larger—you will be on the up-grade instead of the down—and by and bye you will arrive at the north pole of perfect health.
